The Global Marshall Plan Initiative

Prof. Dr. Dr. Franz Josef Radermacher

Globalisation today does not lead the world into a peaceful future and a sustainable state. Instead, insufficient governance structures threaten the ecological stability of the world and increase social and cultural gaps. We are on a route towards collapse or "brasilianisation". Only a new global governance structure, following the principle of balance as implemented in all successful countries and employed in the European Union as a supranational political entity offers a chance for a peaceful future for all. The Global Marshall Plan is a step in this direction.
